SOCIAL WORK QUALITY ASSURANCE PROGRAMS A Comparative Analysis

by Claudia J. Coulton

In 1977 NASW commissioned Claudia J. Coulton to study existing social work quality assurance programs in health care. Her report will prove invaluable for those facilities currently developing quality assurance programs. Some major findings—which may serve as guidelines—include:

- Components of social work quality assurance programs
- Social work information systems data elements
- Criteria of peer review systems
- Systems designed to assure social work access
- Minimizing costs of quality assurance programs
- Using quality assurance program findings
- Quality assurance programs and PSROs
- Testing quality assurance program validity

Natural Helping Networks

A Strategy for Prevention

by Alice H. Collins and Diane L. Pancoast

We all know individuals, both in the professions and among the lay public, who take on the task of helping their friends and acquaintances in many ways. These “natural neighbors” often bring together people who might be helpful to each other in “natural helping networks.”

Natural Helping Networks: A Strategy for Prevention demonstrates how social workers, and others in helping professions, acting as consultants, can enter into mutually valuable alliances with the “natural neighbors.”

The book tells you how to locate, identify and recruit “natural helping neighbors” among the populations you want to serve better and how to use consultative techniques to form a productive partnership.
